

Dr Thomas Upton is a post-doctoral clinical research fellow working in Professor Lightman's group at the University of Bristol. His interests are dynamics of hormones and other biorhythms and he is a specialist in the clinical microdialysis of hormones and metabolites. In this talk he will discuss collaborative work using wearable technology, including novel ambulatory microdialysis of hormones, to investigate dynamical relationships between oscillating systems in humans