

Dr Eder Zavala is an applied mathematician developing a theoretical framework to understand what makes physiological rhythms robust to certain chronodisruptions but fragile to others. His talk will explore how mathematics can advance our understanding of endocrine systems as interlocked oscillators, and how this insight can in turn support the diagnosis and management of endocrine conditions.”